Eric Brand

The mid-20th Century was a time of prosperity and innovation; business was booming. With a vision to create the premier architectural millwork and cabinetry company on the West Coast, Sam Patterson, Sr., and Jim Barnett created Columbia with relentless dedication to quality and customer satisfaction. All these years later, those same values of hard work, integrity, and pride in a superior product are alive and thriving throughout the company. Columbia is like a family built on lasting relationships, honesty, and trust.

At Columbia, manufacturing cabinets and showcases are both an art and a craft. As an art, they captivate and influence people in the way they feel and act in a space. As a craft, it is the painstaking work of highly experienced cabinetmakers, assemblers, and finishers whose driving ambition is to create products that evoke style, quality, and enduring beauty.

Working closely with architects and designers, our project managers oversee every step of the production process, from the initial estimates through drawings, milling, fabrication, finishing, shipping, and installation. The result is a product that not only meets the most rigorous specifications of our clients but is a work of art.

As of 2019, Columbia has been acquired by Eric Brand, thereby increasing Columbia's sourcing and infrastructure. For over 25 years, both owners have had a close personal and professional relationship, sharing manufacturing partners in Asia and collaborating on countless projects.
